

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a massive body having handles to facilitate maneuvering, and an attached chain. The chain can
5 be attached quickly around burglar bar doors and/or windows and the massive body swung in such fashion as to rapidly carry the burglar bar door and/or window away from its supports. The present invention can then be carried on its return swing into the remaining entry door in much the same way as a 10 conventional battering ram.